

Master Class on Land Governance and Corruption

The Namibia University of Science and Technology (NUST), through the Department of Land and Property Sciences is the Southern Node for the Network of Excellence on Land Governance in Africa (NELGA). The network was established by the African Land Policy Centre (ALPC) in cooperation with Germany, the World Bank and other partners. The overall vision of NELGA is to create strong capacities for good land governance and contribution to support the implementation of the AU Land Agenda through training and research.

The role of NUST as the Node for NELGA Southern Africa Hub, is to provide and facilitate academic education and training; to conduct applied research on land related matter and to promote knowledge management, dissemination and networking by informing land policy development and land governance in Africa.

The NUST-NELGA Southern Africa Node hereby presents its first Master Class on Land Governance and Corruption.

Course Aim

To provide participants with thorough knowledge of the ethos of good land governance and the negative impacts of corruption in both the private and public sector. It is designed to be interactive by providing contemporary case studies to allow course participants to critically analyse and offer solutions on some of the pertinent challenges within the land sector. The guiding objective is to demonstrate how the lack of good governance principles at the various levels of the land delivery system fuels corruption with devastating consequences, especially for the less privileged in society.

Target Audience

Academics, masters and PhD students, mid-level managers in the land and housing sector, practitioners from development organisations, media, governments and stakeholders who are interested in or work in the field of land governance.
